SAUNAS PREMIUM

THE SAUNA

Of ancient Scandinavian origin, the sauna is a place to connect with the primal elements of nature, allowing us to attune ourselves to them. A wood-burning stove filled with volcanic rocks and sprinkled with water generates intense heat.

Doctors and researchers worldwide have discovered in recent decades the numerous positive effects of saunas on the body. The alternation of intense heat and cooling offers many benefits for our health.

Sweating eliminates toxins, purifies and nourishes the skin, restoring its elasticity and freshness. The respiratory system is cleared, strengthened, and more resistant to infections. Gradually, muscles relax and become more supple.

The sauna thus proves to be a true stress reliever in our high-pressure world, providing moments of rejuvenation. A regular sauna session takes place at a temperature of 75 to 110°C, depending on the individual.
